NEWS FROM THE HOME FRONT

Sterling Sets the Standard for Employee Designations

Once again Sterling Custom Homes has positioned itself as the industry leader, this time in the areas of employee education and industry accreditation. “We very well may be the most educated, accredited custom homebuilder in the country for an operation of our size,” claims Duke McDowell, President of Sterling Custom Homes.

The National Association of Homebuilders has developed a rigorous curriculum for industry professionals to enhance their knowledge and status within the industry. Over the past two years, Sterling set its sights on four major designations - Certified Graduate Builder (CGB), Certified Graduate Remodeler (CGR), Certified Green Professional (CGP) and Graduate Master Builder (GMB).

Duke McDowell and Vick Pope each hold three of these prestigious designations, CGB, CGP and GMB. Gary Grambley has earned both CGB and GMB designations and both Adam Williams and Kevin Teeters are CGB's. Hank Martin, the Managing Partner of Sterling Home Care & Remodeling, rounds out the group with both the CGP and CGR designations.

“Twelve designations in a company of nine employees is quite an accomplishment” says Gary Grambley, Sterling’s Sales and Marketing Director. “Duke has made a significant investment in our education in order to advance our building and business knowledge as well as to enhance the professionalism of our company. It really shows in the level of service we are able to provide to our customers.”

In addition to the rigorous coursework and experience requirements, all designations require continuing education to keep designees informed of new products and market trends.

HANK'S HOMEOWNERS TIPS

Check your window screens for rips or tears. With the nice Spring weather, you will want to open the windows and let the fresh air in – but not the insects.
